

Question	Answer
How many 2nd line support teams are there?	In total there are three (3) teams: • Claims and Payouts handle refunds to customers. • Fulfillment BOM handles reissues/rebooking and GDS ancillary requests. • Fulfillment Improvement UPA handles Accounting, IBE ticketing automation analysis, and accounting. • Fulfillment ADM ATH ADM and ACM
When RA is rejected in BSP and contact with the airline/consolidator is required, who should make this contact?	2nd Line support team will contact the airline or consolidator.
If we have won a chargeback and the customer never contacts us for a refund, will the customer be refunded automatically?	No, if the customer hasn't explicitly requested a refund we will keep the money.
If authorization is required from the airline who should contact YY in such cases?	If authorization is needed at the time of the cancellation it is FL who will make sure that everything is done before sending the order to 2nd Line for handling.
If RA is rejected, who should inform the customer accordingly?	2nd Line support team will inform the customer if the RA rejection means that we will not be able to receive any money.
Who informs the customer of a rejected refund?	When a refund is being rejected, it is the 2nd Line who will inform the customer via email.
How can we see the refund status of an RA?	The actual status of an RA can only be seen in the BSP link portal. You can however use the Refund tab and taskbar there as a quick cheat sheet to see how far in the refund process the order is.
Do we always receive money if we can see it in Edvin Refund tab with the status: Received money from the airline?	You can rely on the information visible in the Refund tab. This is the same information that the 2nd Line support team has.
How many days do we need to wait between the airline company authorizing BSP and we receive money if FOP is CASH.	We currently wait 3 weeks (21 days) before we proceed with a payout for authorized refund applications for tickets issued in cash.
What happened when the customer proceeded with Chargeback and we won the case? Is the customer still entitled to a refund?	The customer is still entitled to a refund if we have won the chargeback dispute. 2nd Line will proceed with a refund of the amount we received from the airline, just as for any other booking.
How can we see if a timed-out order has been charged to the customer?	You can see it in the PSP portal.
Who refunds the money to the customer for CC2C orders when we were unable to issue the tickets due to technical error? Who handles those orders?	When a CC2C ticket fails to be issued, the customer hasn't been debited for their flight. There is nothing to refund the customer for their tickets. If the customer has purchased baggage, the Payouts team will handle the baggage (or other ancillary add-on) refund.
If the order is on the refund queue, but the outbound PNR was canceled 5 months ago and the inbound PNR a few weeks ago, when handling the order, will 2nd Line Support check both PNRs at the same time or will they handle them separately?	2nd Line team will handle the PNRs separately even if they are in the same order. In which order and when depends on what it looks like on the refund queue and other priorities BO may have at the time.
What are the queues Manual handle and Manual Antares in Edvin for?	Manual - Handle Refund Case is the refund queue the 2nd Line refunds teams work from. Manual - Refund breakdown to Antares is a queue where orders are placed there automatically. Always remove orders from those queues, when the orders have been resolved from RD.
What happens with orders that we didn't receive a refund for a long time? GDS and LCC bookings alike. Are they being removed from the refund dashboard? Should the customer reach out to the airline in such cases or us?	For LCC PNRs where the customer has to contact the airline and request a refund, we keep them in the queue for 4 months due to the fact we can't refund them ourselves. This is to allow the customers and airlines to handle the refund request on their end and on their terms. For GDS bookings and LCC PNRs where ETG has to process the claim, we will never remove them from the queue as we want to monitor these refunds. In these cases, 2nd Line agents have made a refund of the ticket against the airline and we have a different kind of insight and control of the money flow. When a booking is removed from the refund dashboard, 2nd Line always sends the customer an email explaining the situation and if they need to contact us or the airline for further information.
How are cases where we have received a refund for 3 out of 4 tickets? Does the 2nd Line team wait before processing the payout? If yes, how long and who follows up on it? Do they reach out to the airline?	2nd Line will check that all 4 tickets were indeed claimed, if yes: they investigate further to see what has happened. If only 3 out of 4 tickets have been claimed, then 2nd Line requests a refund of the last ticket and we pause the payout until we have received the money for the last ticket. It is not possible to estimate how long that process takes as it depends on how the final ticket was refunded to us: via GDS or BSP.
